

Thanks To You All!

My wife Pat for always believing in me even when I didn't feel worth being believed in.

Neil Campbell, aka "Dr. Biology", for inspiring me early on and constantly encouraging me not to give up.

My friends and colleagues at UCR for putting up with me even when I wasn't worthy of being put up with.

The UCSB Chemistry and Biochemistry department for its much appreciated hospitality and friendship.

All of my students everywhere since you all inspired me to try and be an author.

Professor George Hammond, my incredibly inspirational graduate mentor who caused me to strive to be a teacher like him, and who taught me anything that I know about creativity.

Professors Donald Cram and Saul Winstein, my extraordinary undergraduate chemistry professors who first showed me that chemistry was exciting.

Professors Cheves Walling and Walter Kauzmann, my classy postdoctoral mentors who did classy chemistry "under pressure", and inspired me to try too.

Mr. Myron Claxton, my high school chemistry teacher, for kindling the flame.

Mrs. Freeman, my 10th grade Latin teacher, who not-so-tactfully publicly informed me that laziness and mediocrity were unacceptable.

All my teachers everywhere since you all seemed excellent to me.

And of course my Mom and Dad for always being proud of me and making me feel that I could do anything!
